NEWS

Pares 2.0

A new version of the Spanish Archives Portal is now available! Pares 2.0 is the result of four years of technical and archival work on part of the Spanish State Archives and the Spanish Ministry of Culture. The new portal allows to access the same content as the previous version, but with important new functionalities such as multilingual research, sharing descriptive records, and new links between records and images

E-Space Portal

The Europeana Space Project has released a new platform, E-Space, an access point to billions of digital objects and resources from a number of major repositories, such as Youtube. The portal provides content search, aggregation, interoperability, reuse and other services. It is the outcome of the EU-funded Europeana Space project, which ended on the 31st January 2017 but will continue through the initiative "E-Space: Where Culture meets Creativity".

Both individuals and institutions can join the partnership; for more information, please contact info@europeana-space.eu

IN THE LOOP

META - VVBAD

META is the online magazine of the the Flemish library and archives association (VVBAD). VVBAD was founded in 1921 and gathers professionals, libraries, archives and documentation centres in the Flanders, the Dutch-speaking part of Belgium.

Tweets archives

More and more politicians use Twitter as a fundamental part of their communication strategy, and the problem of archiving social media is currently a hot topic for any archive. The French National Archives have signed a deal with Manuel Valls, former Prime Minister of France, to archive the tweets as Prime Minister from the @manuelvalls account. The initiative is inspired by Barack Obama's decision to donate the official US President account, @POTUS, to the White House Archives. Let's hope more and more members of the political world will follow these steps!
